HEENZO

(Registered name for HEAN'S ESSENCE)

The Famous Money-Saving Remedy for Asthma, Bronchitis, Colds.

2s. worth of HEENZO goes as far as
£1 worth of Ordinary Cough Mixture.

The Medicinal Value of HEENZO is certified to by many eminent people. Here are extracts from just a few letters, out of several thousand received—

SIR ERNEST SHACKLETON, K.C.M.G., the famous Antarctic Explorer :—

"A parcel of HEENZO (Hean's Essence) went south on my recent Antarctic Expedition on the ship 'Aurora,' and was used by members of the Ross Sea party. The remedy proved of value under the exceedingly severe conditions experienced in the Ross Sea."

SIR H. RIDER HAGGARD, K.C.M.G., the eminent Novelist :—

"It may interest you to know that I am taking HEENZO (Hean's Essence) with me on my return journey to England, where I shall be pleased to bring its merits under the notice of my friends."

SIR H. N. P. WOLLASTON, K.C.M.G., I.S.O., Chairman of the Australian Censorship Board :—

"I have used HEENZO COUGH DIAMONDS and found them very efficacious. They seem to constitute an excellent remedy."

The REV. GEORGE WALTERS, of the Unitarian Church, Hyde Park, Sydney :—

"I have much pleasure in letting you know that when a severe cold caught me in its grip last year, nothing was so effective in checking and finally curing it as a free and constant use of HEENZO (Hean's Essence). I have also found that your COUGH DIAMONDS are excellent for the throat, and would not like to be without them. Please send me a further supply of both the Essence and the Diamonds."

Heenzo Cough Diamonds

to which Sir Harry Wollaston and Rev. George Walters refer, are Lozenges specially prepared for those who require a pocket cough remedy. They are fine for the VOICE and THROAT. Price, 1s. per tin.

HEENZO and HEENZO COUGH DIAMONDS are obtainable from Chemists and Stores everywhere, or direct from THE CLEVELAND LINE.

A popular line of railway, among several which have the Melbourne Street (South Brisbane) Station as their central depôt, is the twenty-three mile stretch which ends on the peninsula at Cleveland. After the thickly populated suburban area has been passed, some pretty spaces embellished by tree-lined tidal creeks are seen, also some happily preserved primeval ridges closely covered by giant gum-trees. Glimpses are caught of meat-works and factories, and later a region of orchards is entered upon. Everywhere there are evidences of new occupation, and the prevalence of cottage homes explains the heavy human freightage of the early morning incoming trains.

Railway Time Table between Cleveland and South Brisbane.

Trains leave Cleveland daily (except Sunday) at 6.0, 7.33, 9.40, 11.30 (except Saturday) a.m., and 12.10 (Saturday), 1.12 (except Saturday), 2.37 (Saturday), 4.10 (except Saturday), 4.30 (Saturday), 6.25 (except Saturday), and 8.40 p.m. Arriving at South Brisbane at 7.16, 8.45, 11.0 a.m., and 1.5, 1.30, 2.38, 4.3, 5.52, 7.50, and 9.55 p.m.

SUNDAYS.

Trains leave Cleveland at 9.0 a.m., 5.45 p.m., and 9.0 p.m.; arriving at South Brisbane at 10.19 a.m., 6.55 p.m., and 10.17 p.m.

WYNNUM AND MANLY.

The first seaside settlements reached are those of Wynnum, Wynnum South, and Manly. These all adjoin, and cover an extensive and extensively populated area.

At Wynnum there is a long pier in association with large bathing enclosures. In a little cove near the pier a number of motor boats are moored, and are available for hire by fishing parties or for excursions on the bay and to the adjacent islands. The nearest bay island, known as Green Island, now has a jetty and steps to make easy landing, and is eagerly visited by many to whom hitherto it was a semi-mysterious terra incognita.

WYNNUM.

The most busy business streets are in Wynnum South, and the number and variety of the shops show that a large permanent population has decided that the area is a very favourable one for the demonstration of that homely Scotch proverb:

“East, west—hame’s best.”

The facilities for bathing are numerous.

The villa residences show a tendency both to picturesqueness and comfort.

Educational advantages for children are provided by large private colleges, as well as State schools.

Manly is all the more interesting and picturesque because it is hilly. So many nobly large indigenous timbers remain, and there is so much tender foliage of less lofty growth, that it has much of the charm of the bush as well as the interests of civic habitation. This mingling of natural bush odours—the blossom of shrubs and the hygienic fragrance of eucalyptus—make it a site specially suitable for sojourn by those seeking recuperation.

Railway Time Table between Manly and Wynnum and South Brisbane.

WELLINGTON POINT AND ORMISTON.

Before Wellington Point has been reached, the orchard area has been fairly entered upon. Bananas, pineapples, papaws, custard apples, passion fruit, mangoes, strawberries, rosellas, oranges, &c., are seen under expert cultivation, and visitors from the South begin to realise that they are in a State which in its productiveness has something entirely new and different to offer for their inspection. They will note, too, the rich redness of the volcanic soil which enables perfection in fruit-bearing and magnitude in crop.

Wellington Point is a charming agricultural village which contains some old-established homes and orchards, and has a clean, picturesque sea front.

Further on at Ormiston the first experiments in sugar-growing within the territory were made. The whole area thereabouts now is under orchard cultivation, and its undulating surface assists spectacular effect.

At Raby Bay, near Cleveland, the soil is still more intense in its redness and richness, and the roofs have adopted a brick-dust colour.

CLEVELAND, THE BEAUTIFUL.

After Brisbane, Cleveland is the oldest of the Moreton Bay settlements. In the days when Brisbane was still only a village efforts were made by an association of squatters to have Cleveland made the chief port of the territory. The effort was doomed to failure because of the unsuitability of the place to provide anchorage for any but ships of very small tonnage: also because of other obvious reasons. During the period of the squatters' determination to boycott Brisbane as a place of import and export a Customs House was built at Cleveland, and its brick substantiality is still in evidence and in use in a portion of that favourite week-end and holiday retreat, the Pier Hotel.

Cleveland West, which is first reached, is charmingly picturesque in every season. Out of its bright red soil grow ancient, wide-spreading trees—Moreton Bay figs, bunyas, weeping figs—and form avenues of rest and shade. There are park spaces and sports grounds; red banks covered partially by flowering creepers; green points on which the village children play and visitors recline; and beautiful home gardens and orchards. A miniature church with red-tiled roof fits in nicely with the colour scheme. Close by are wooded spaces which are islands at high tide, and Peel Island—large and lonely—looms up opposite.

Passing on from the terminus towards the end of the furthest point the way of the road is narrow, and at high tide water sprays the soil. Towards its end the peninsula widens out sufficiently to admit of room for a group of buildings and an oval-shaped and enclosed grass space for public use. A few shady Moreton Bay figs, the red roofs of the buildings, a lighthouse, white railings, private gardens, a very long pier with a shelter and landing-steps at the end, also its close association on three sides with the waters of the bay, make of Cleveland Point a very unique and picturesque spot. Reached by way of the land, it offers something in the nature of a surprise. Seen from a passing ship, it provokes interest and inquiry.

Ample sea-bathing enclosures are available in Cleveland for the use of visitors. Fishing from the pier or boat-fishing usually prove successful as well as enthralling. Drives to the farms, Victoria Point, and Redland Bay can always be arranged.

Many Brisbane doctors specially recommend the air of Cleveland as the necessary tonic for convalescents, and for persons who prefer what they call "a good rest holiday" its charms are paramount.

REDLAND BAY.

Beauty lovers long ago discovered Redland Bay. It is distant nine miles by driving-road from Cleveland West, and a comfortable and roomy motor-car leaves that station twice daily, and conveys mails and passengers to Redland Bay agricultural village. The road passes through Redland country nearly all the way. Thriving fruit farms with pretty homesteads line the route, which at one portion is so high that it overlooks a broad sweep of the bay and includes some of the islands in the view. The driver of the mail motor-car is the good fairy who throws out the printed daily news and bundles of correspondence towards farm-house gates, as he passes without pausing in his career. At one farm a watchful, shaggy-haired dog waits to catch the bundle of words, and proudly carries it inside to those for whom it is designed.

Some of the orchards seem to be given over almost entirely to the production of that delectable fruit, the custard apple—a fact which suggests that it may be cultivated with certainty of profit.

A branch road leads to Mount Cotton. Another briefly approaches Victoria Point, where there is a sandy beach and a beautiful view.

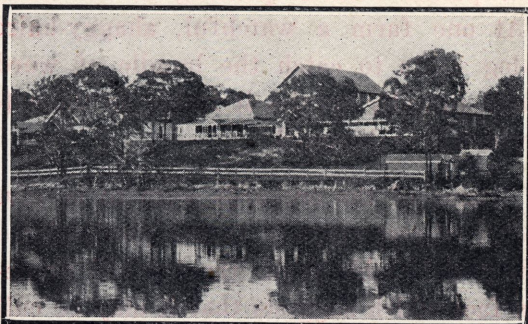

Original settlement at Redland Bay began at the present hotel site. There was no railway to Cleveland then, and the man who established a country estate on the shore of the beautiful bay used to drive down from Brisbane, guiding his spanking six-horse team over a road which passed through wildness most of the way. Some of the fine old trees on the grounds adjoining the hotel were planted by him, and now they are looked up to as the ancients of the jacaranda tribe.

The scenic charm of Redland Bay cannot be told fittingly in words, but those who see it carry away a lasting impression of beauty in a perfect setting. Grassy slopes, wooded points, bluest of blue water, completeness in detail, nearness which emphasises distance, neighbouring island farms and remote island hills, winding red roads through intense sub-tropical cultivation, fruit for the epicure, maize crops, vegetable gardens, flowers, sleek bovine blessedness, balm and beauty everywhere.

HOLIDAY RESORTS.

Here is something distinctly typical; something which widely experienced travellers have described as a perfect gem in Creation's crown.

SOUTHPORT.

Southport is a delightful marine resort very easily reached from Brisbane. The starting-point of the fifty miles rail trip is the Melbourne Street Railway Station, South Brisbane, and there is a cheap and convenient train service. En route there may be studied the rich agricultural area round about Beenleigh.

At Southport some of the State's richest residents have established beautiful homes on the water front. There are there, too, a number of fine hotels and boarding-houses, and many furnished villas and cottages are available for brief or extended tenancy. On the water front is an esplanade two miles long, with facilities for safe bathing along a considerable portion of its length. The water front here referred to is really the wide estuary of Nerang River, which is almost entirely sheltered by Stradbroke Island. The ocean beach is gained by a brief ferry-trip and a few minutes' walk from the opposite landing-place. It is a beach of enormous length, stretching as it does southwards as far as Burleigh

Head. Surf-bathing there is as safe as enjoyable, and the usual dressing-rooms, etc., have been supplemented by special consideration for picnickers. Another fine ocean beach can be reached by crossing over to Stradbroke Island.

On the town water front is an extensive concrete pier, which is much frequented by promenaders and anglers. On Saturday evenings and during the holidays a band plays there. Attached to the pier are large public baths.

Bowlers and other patrons of athletics will find in Southport well kept playing grounds.

Many delightful motor boat trips can be made. Boats, with or without service, are available for hire. The upper reaches of Nerang River supply very pretty scenery, and to them may be added Coomera Creek as another profitable fishing-ground.

Hundreds of private motor boats and yachts frequent the waters round about, and at holiday times the scene is very gay indeed. An annual aquatic carnival is held, and its programme extends over several days.

Fishing catches include all the familiar Moreton Bay varieties, as well as groper, rock cod, parrot, and bonito. In the winter months schnapper-fishing results in some big hauls.

The climate and situation of Southport is so conducive to health and vigour that several large boarding-schools have been established there under the auspices of religious institutions; also some under private proprietorship.

Fine motoring roads lead out from Southport to the adjacent agricultural and dairying districts. Unlike many coastal areas, the scene on the mainland is entirely removed from barrenness, and the conjunction of fertility and ozonic air is an advantage always much appreciated.

On the banks of the creeks, and on Stradbroke, beautiful living material for the stocking or replenishment of bush-houses can be obtained easily and in profusion.

Shops and cafés in Southport are thoroughly up-to-date. The book shops especially show regard for the needs of leisurely hours.

The town is lit by electricity.

Motor cars are available for hire, and there is never any difficulty in regard to provisioning picnic parties.

SANDGATE.

Sandgate, a pretty marine township, almost near enough to Brisbane to be classed as suburban, is speedily approached by rail. A number of express trains run daily, also a service which serves all the suburbs en route.

On the way visitors unaccustomed to sub-tropical agriculture will note with interest pineapple farms in the vicinity of Nudgee. Near Nudgee there is a beach much frequented by picnic parties.

The branch line ends at Sandgate, and visitors may exercise choice in the matter of leaving the train at Sandgate Central Station, from which a wide street leads to the Lower Esplanade, or may pass on to the terminus, from whence the way to the water front leads through a small park and up a gradual height till the Upper Esplanade is gained. Below the esplanade is a long, wide pier on which are a refreshment kiosk, shelters, and seats. Alongside, on the sand beneath spreading trees, there is provided all the usual appointments for a moving picture show. Programmes are displayed periodically, and are witnessed by large gatherings. Further down the pier promenade band concerts sometimes are held, but even without such artificial attractions the scene rarely lacks animation.

SANDGATE.

Always pretty and interesting, Sandgate is especially so when its shore is embraced by full flowing tides. Then the vivid greens of grass and foliage, the azure of the sky and an expanse of marine blue in perfection of colour, pretty houses, well-kept gardens, the adventurous length of the pier, boats on the bay, and another inhabited shore beckoning from some miles across the water make a scene of magnetic quality.

The town stretches for miles along the shore, which, for the greater part of the distance, has its picturesqueness increased by reason of its height above the sea-level. There are public bathing-houses and enclosures beside the pier, and many private bathing-houses in other situations along the shore. A small sandy beach for the little ones, good fishing for the mature male folk, and many shady seats on the pleasant green sward supply diversion to suit all tastes.

Energy is quickened by the prospect of the long walk on high and low levels. Here and there are little lookout shelters, and both on the Upper and Lower Esplanades there are trees and seats.

The wants of casual visitors are provided for by hotels, boarding-houses, and furnished villas, but the population for much the greater part is permanent, a fact which has assured for Sandgate those facilities which are demanded by the twentieth century standard of comfort.

Picnickers have no difficulty in obtaining hot water, and refreshment cafés are plentiful.

With motorists Sandgate is always in favour, and on Sundays and holidays much liveliness is added by an influx of horse vehicles and riders from farms which have existence not far away.

Two miles distant on the Pine River is a typically beautiful scene, made none the less beautiful by the existence of a refreshment kiosk. The shire councillors, too, have furnished seats, tables, fireplaces, and other utilities for the benefit of picnickers. The spot is much favoured by fishermen and bathers, and is closely associated with beautiful trees and foliage.

With its natural charms added to by the utilitarian virtue of accessibility, Sandgate certainly is a place with which every visitor to Brisbane should make acquaintance, and which every Brisbane resident should know well.

Railway Time Table between Sandgate and Brisbane.

ELIGIBLE MEN,

If the Allies lose overseas, next Exhibition Day may see you working for the Hun. The Belgians can tell you there is no fun in that.

Will you exchange your present freedom for the lashings and tortures to which the Huns subject conquered nations?

Will you risk the profanation of your women folk by refusing to enlist? or will you help your blood brothers who say emphatically, with ball and blade, that Australian women are worth fighting for.

This is a good Exhibition. We hope that you enjoy yourselves, but don't forget we are paying the price, and we now ask you to pay a bit off the account against you.

be indulged in all the time. It is surf bathing with that charm of safety which attaches to tidal waters on a bay beach, and there are residents who take their dip in the lively but never too violent breakers all the year round.

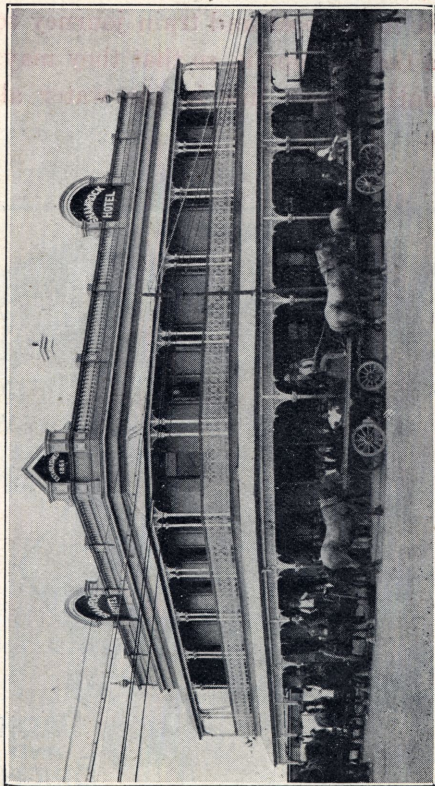

In the background tall, thickly growing timbers supply a truly rural aspect, and camper's tents make a calico township under their shade in holiday seasons. Hotel accommodation of good class, boarding-houses, and furnished cottages and villas are available for the many who have no taste for the invigorating rigor of camp life.

The waters round about Woody Point are much favoured by fishermen who have been there before. Some business men, too, who make of the Izaak Walton idea a special hobby, make also a daily accomplishment of the motor-boat and train journey to and from the metropolis, so that they may have an anticipatory line in the water all the time.

BOARDING ARRANGEMENTS.

THE School House is under the immediate care of the Head Master and Mrs Bousfield. Boys of eleven years of age, and upwards, are received as boarders. The House stands in the School grounds of 18 acres, on the summit of one of the highest hills that overlook the city. It was built expressly for the purpose for which it is used; the dormitories are lofty, spacious, and well ventilated. Evening preparation is carried on under the supervision of a Master, and assistance is given as required. A sufficient herd of dairy cows is kept to supply liberally the requirements of the House. The position of the School enables pupils to avail themselves of the resources of the capital of the State in regard to musical or other instruction, but no boarder is allowed to leave the School grounds without permission of the Head Master.

The Laboratories recently erected for the practical study of Chemistry and Physics have, it is believed, no superior in the Australian Schools.

The extensive grounds afford ample space for all school games, and there is a flourishing Rowing Club.

For illustrated prospectus, and all information, apply to the Head Master, or the Secretary to the Trustees.

Many young people allow their education to finish when they leave ordinary school. Not that the majority of them really meant to give up study, but, in many cases, their parents could not afford to send them to College, or distance from town might prevent their joining a class where they could qualify for a better position, better conditions of work, and higher pay.

TOOWOOMBA.

Visitors who come to Brisbane by rail from the South catch a fleeting glimpse of some of the beauties which lie round about Toowoomba, and not infrequently they decide to come again and acquire closer acquaintanceship with them. Visitors who arrive by the sea route find that by the inclusion of Toowoomba in their programme of tours they add much to their knowledge of the State's natural beauty and fertility.

The train service offers ample choice of daylight travel to the picturesque city which is the chief centre of population in the district of Darling Downs, but a morning train which leaves the Central Railway Station in Brisbane at about the ordinary breakfast hour usually is regarded as the most favourable for the purpose of sight-seeing. The journey is pleasant and interesting throughout the whole of the way, but it is when the railway begins its circuitous climb over the Ranges that eyes find no further interest, however momentary, in print, and the beauties of the scene engross conversation. All experienced travellers know that streams wear greater beauty of natural garniture in their near association with mountains, and the increasing picturesqueness in its upper reaches of a stream occasionally glimpsed by the way presages approach to highlands.

The thrilling beauty of the highlands here entered upon would compensate for any trouble and pains that might attach to a ten times longer journey. The description supplied some years back by an enthusiastic nature-lover may again fitly serve to tell the story:—

“Passing over a track so winding as to be at times almost spiral, the train moves on with serpentine motion, ascending higher and higher through mountain scenes, dashing through jealous tunnels and cuttings which exasperatingly, though momentarily, shut out the scenic feast, and at last reaching an altitude from which the traveller may gaze far, far away over a vast expanse of undulating grassed and wooded ranges to which distance lends varying colours ranging from olive green to grey, from the ocean's blue to the violet's purple.

“Almost might one imagine the scene to reveal not terra firma and arborescence but the irregular surface of a vast inland sea.

“From Spring Bluff, where the natural beauties of the scene are added to by the beauty of the trees which shade the railway station—the pale purple-blossomed jacaranda, which is a favourite subject for the brush of Queensland artists—the railway ascends until it reaches Harlaxton, where it attains an elevation of 2,003 feet.

“The ranges seem to recede, as though their task of revelation were finished, as the way leads by a slight descent to Toowoomba.

“The urban region is marked by willow-lined brooks, ruddy roads, grassy plots, and verdant foliage. All hail, Toowoomba!”

pretty parks, picturesque walks and drives, and its magnificent views of mountain and range, is full of permanent attraction.

Nature provided uniqueness of site, and man, in homage to Nature, has made of civic perspective a fitting addition to the surrounding scene.

The trees, which line most of the streets, are noble in size and varied in kind. Oak, beech, elm, ash, poplar, camphor laurel, weeping fig, and other varieties illustrate beauty and provide shade.

In the private and public gardens flowers seem to express even more than their usual beauty. Toowoomba violets are famous all over Australia.

Round about are many orange orchards, glossily green and vividly gold.

The aldermen of Toowoomba have shown much wisdom and forethought in the matter of reserving as park spaces sites which overlook the vast broad sweep of the Ranges. Perhaps the best view of the kind is that obtainable from Picnic Point. There a thoughtful devotee of Nature may sit by the hour watching the wonderful pastel-tinted effects of sunshine and shadow. There is something communicative and magnetic in the view. Nature talks to the thoughtful and the solitary, using as words and sentences the hills with their wooded grandeur, the wind with its psalms, the shadows with their mystery, the sky with its infinite sapphire, and, in the spring-time, the wattles with their golden sweetness and glory.

As science advances, old knowledge becomes ignorance. The artist, the incipient poet, or the simple Nature-lover who looks from Picnic Point on the enchanting scene to-day, knows that earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, and the fierce torrential rush of diverted inland seas have all played their part in forming the landscape, in building the lordly ranges, in carving the course of streams and waterfalls, in giving character to the soil and those things above and below its surface.

Every gully in Toowoomba has its fringe of willows. Every open park space has its cricket pitch, football field, and tennis court.

A waterworks scheme supplies the original compound fluid in perfection of purity, and there are municipal swimming baths.

The extent of the city's population and the importance of the district may be noted in the fact that Toowoomba possesses two daily newspapers which, in quality and interest, compare favourably with the metropolitan Press.

The salubrity of the climate always assures full dormitories in the private boarding-schools.

As well as many good hotels, there are well-kept boarding-houses.

Spring Bluff is a favourite picnic-ground with residents and visitors. It is approached by train through the beautiful scenery already described, or by a fascinating driving-road. Other interesting drives are those to Highfields and on the grimly named Hell Hole road.

As the central depôt of a number of branch railways to towns in agricultural and pastoral districts, Toowoomba offers to the inquiring and active visitor a series of excursions by rail. Several garages have motor cars and drivers available for hire, and the books of such businesses rarely record a dull day.

STANTHORPE.

Passing from Toowoomba by the Sydney mail train route, visitors may note the fact that Queensland's pride in the fertility and beauty of that extensive area known as the Darling Downs is amply justified. A number of important towns will be seen before Stanthorpe is reached.

Stanthorpe is now widely recognised as an ideal site for sanatoria, and several, including a military hospital for pulmonary diseases, are in existence there. The town is nearly 3,000 feet above sea-level, and near it, as at Dalveen and Thulimbah, there are still higher areas which are well peopled and highly productive.

Stanthorpe had its genesis as a mining village. Within the space of a few years £3,000,000 worth of tin was obtained there, and the metal is still procurable, at the expense of added time and trouble, not far away.

To-day Stanthorpe, a compact little town, is the centre of a great fruit-growing district. Travellers who superficially survey it from the train always remark on the prevalence of boulders, and those who know something of the nature and origin of soils may decide that the white sandy soil so closely associated with the boulders had its origin and constantly receives its phosphatic additions from the tendency of granite to decompose. It was not till the easily accessible tin deposits were exhausted that the original inhabitants of Stanthorpe gave any useful thought to other possible values in the soil. Many of those who had acquired a few acres of barren decomposed granite soil, with its plentiful sprinkling of boulders, left their families in possession while they went elsewhere to seek for work and wages. Finally some successful experiments in orchardising by squatters and others and a favourable expert report on the fruit-growing possibilities of Stanthorpe soil reawakened a spirit of enterprise. Nature, with her own curious chemistry, had been for ages decomposing portions of the granite belt of 800 square miles on which Stanthorpe lies, and forces seemingly antagonistic had been working harmoniously together to bring about a condition of soil admirably suited to orchard cultivation, and also containing nearly all the phosphates necessary in the successful cultivation of vegetables. Aroused by expert advice, aforetime fossickers and others woke up to the fact that wealth could still be produced from their seemingly ill-natured soil if it were worked for purposes of cultivation rather than for mineralising.

To-day there are near Stanthorpe thousands of acres of land under intense orchard cultivation. Apples, pears, peaches, nectarines, apricots, plums, and quinces are profitably produced, and in favourable localities cherries are added to the crop. Occasionally one observes with wonder a grape vine in luxuriant fruitage though seemingly without any but the slenderest foothold among the closely crowding boulders. In some of the small orchards, too, the best apples are picked from trees whose roots lie among big boulders. Some large incomes are made in proportion to the size of the orchards, and even very small acreages provide a comfortable living.

Whilst waiting for returns from their young orchards the orchardists industriously engage in vegetable and tomato growing. The addition of a little manure is all that is required for the successful cultivation of vegetables. Cabbage-growing is very profitable, and the returns from one acre of tomatoes have been known to

Queensland Manufacture

THE exceptional scarcity of farm labour, more especially for dairying, has proved a considerable impediment to this lucrative industry. The firm of Messrs. Wilson & Burton Ltd., Charlotte Street, Brisbane, however, are to be complimented on their foresight in having purchased the patents of what is generally recognised to-day to be the best Mechanical Milker on the Market, namely, The Eureka Milking Machine.

These Machines they are manufacturing in Brisbane, thus assisting both the Manufacturing and Dairying Industries of this State. Not only have they accomplished this satisfactorily, but they have gone a step further in the way of manufacturing a small machine known as the Australian Dairy Maid, to meet the requirements of the small farmer with a machine at a price quite within his reach, and carrying all the features of the original Eureka. Further information on the subject will be supplied on application by average about the same as those from three acres of apple-trees. Potatoes and onions of exceptionally fine quality also are grown.

Opportunity to observe all the cheerful industry attendant on the work of expert orchardists forms one of the inducements to visitors to linger in Stanthorpe, but the locality has many scenic interests to offer as well.

Close beside the town—forming, in fact, a part of it—are hill summits whose daily beckonings must sooner or later be heeded. The eye is chained by huge bald mountain walls of granite so smooth and even in form that they give an impression of the stonemason's art, or by rocky formations turreted like Gothic cathedrals. There are fissures, too, suggestive of rocky sepulchres, biblically reminiscent and always interesting. At some time or other, probably, volcanic forces have been fiercely busy round about.

From Mount Marlay, an easily attained elevation, lying close beside the town, one sees a view charming in every detail. It takes in the pretty centre of population, rich orchards, neat homesteads, running streams, and picturesque mountains.

The peculiarities of the granite formations at Stanthorpe are intensely interesting to strangers. In a direct line about two miles from town, in a detached mountain so low that its summit is easily gained, are the natural fortifications which local tradition claims to have been the stronghold of that notorious bushranger, Thunderbolt, who terrorised a large portion of New South Wales and part of South-Eastern Queensland nearly half a century ago. A famous granite group, situated at about a mile's distance from the Post Office, has been aptly named Sentimental Rocks.

Another fascinating formation is the rock and cave known as Donnelly's Castle.

A trigonometrical survey station has been established on Bald Rock, a huge granite hill fourteen miles from Stanthorpe 4,070 feet above sea-level.

There are interesting creek scenes at Broadwater and Little Broadwater, which are within half an hour's drive.

After heavy rain the roar of waterfalls may attract visitors to scenes in which the water leap is 150 feet in depth.

Further away in the rugged Sundown country—a paradise to the hardy sportsman—are the ever-constant Severn Falls.

From certain points of vantage the town is seen in the form of an ellipse, and with the hills and orchards adjoining it takes on an amphitheatrical appearance.

Driving excursions to attractions over the New South Wales border (five miles distant) may provide pleasant outings.

Blackberrying in the bush and topaz-hunting in the sand also are among the diversions of visitors.

The tonic in the atmosphere has a splendid auxiliary in the tonic in the drinking water which is highly charged with mineral, and in cases of invalidism assists to effect cures.

Not the least of Stanthorpe's many charms as a summer resort for both the weak and the strong are the facts that it has no acquaintance with hot winds and that it is free from mosquitoes.

Good, modern hotels and boarding-houses exist busily all the year round, and rest or sociality may be had according to taste or temperament.

There are some good private schools with accommodation for boarders.

Visitors' books at the hotels show that some wise persons have contracted the habit of an annual sojourn, and this applies both to summer and winter sojourners. Others are faithful to the Spring when golden wattle and snow-white May-blossom add to landscape charm.

It has sometimes happened that those who went to Stanthorpe to recuperate have remained to grow fruit, their decision having rested on the fact that considerably less capital is required for that undertaking than for most branches of primary industry, and that when an orchard has begun to bear, a permanent income is assured at the cost of very little arduous labour.

Saddle Trouble

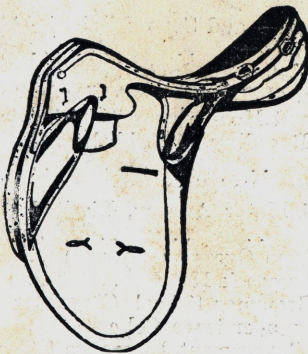

will trouble you if you are careful to see that the saddle you buy is built on a

"KEYHEAD" TREE.

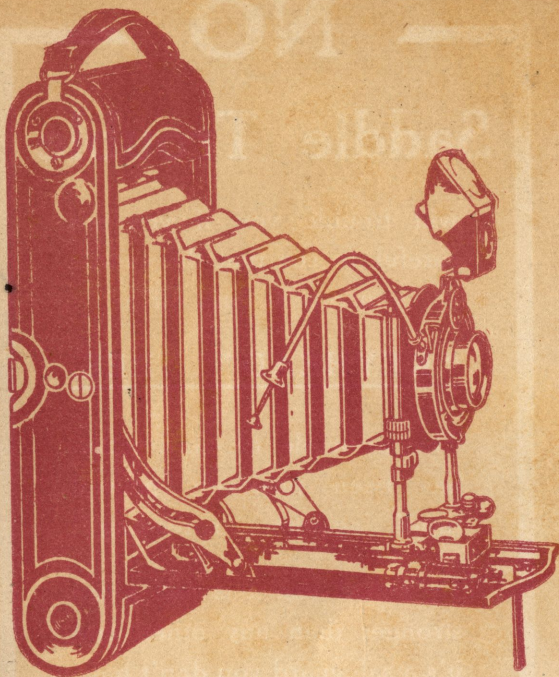

The principle of construction has been positively proved proof against "spreading."

By actual test it is half a ton stronger than any other, and it's a safeguard you don't have to pay any more for.

You could let us know the class of saddle you like and we can have it built for you on a "KEYHEAD" TREE by a competent tradesman.
